Introduction

The number of people displaced from their home environment has doubled in 2020 compared to 2010. As reported by UNHCR in 2020 alone, some 82.4 million people were forcibly displaced¹. It is estimated that about half of the displaced and refugee population are women and girls (about 47%). In some communities, women and girls face daily discrimination and violence simply because of their gender. In times of displacement, this problem escalates.

Since the 24th of February and Russia's invasion in Ukraine, we all witness the terrible impact of war. Thousands of refugees due to the invasion and even more loss of lives. Women and children are moving to other countries for protection. Even today, there are no safe passages for refugees in order to move to areas where their lives won't be in danger. A small number of people have managed to find refuge in other countries, including Greece. We can only hope that the necessary diplomatic solutions will be reached soon.

Unfortunately, the list of countries in crisis is not limited to the European continent. We do not forget conflicts and violence in Afghanistan, Syria, Yemen, Myanmar and beyond. People in many countries of the world find their lives, safety, honour and dignity threatened, and not only because of the war conditions in their countries. In this difficult context we discussed about the woman and specifically the refugee woman.

"I cannot sleep, and I still have many nightmares because of the past"

(Abigail, from Cameroon²)

Women are often the first responders in a crisis, and whether in route or in camps, in home countries or destination countries, they play a crucial role in caring for, sustaining and rebuilding their communities. Yet, refugee and migrant women's needs, priorities and voices are often missing from policies designed to protect and assist them.

In the context of International Women's Day, and with the collaboration of women being active in NAOMI, Ecumenical Workshop for Refugees and QRT (Quick Response Team, Casa Base) we discussed the experiences of refugee women in Greece. We also jointly examined the dynamics and elements that can empower women and help them to participate in decisions that affect their lives (You can see also Annex I).

The coalition meeting took place on Friday, March 11, 2022 at 18:30, via Zoom platform. In a limited number of people were given the opportunity to attend the event. The right conditions were created so that the meeting could take place in a hybrid way. All necessary measures were followed to contain the Covid 19 pandemic. In particular, the in-person meeting was attended by refugees and migrants. People who, we know, they find it difficult to follow online meeting procedures.

The context of the event

The program of the Coalition meeting (You can see Annex II) was formulated together with the four women who were the main speakers. For the preparation, meetings, and visits to the places where the ladies are active took place. Meetings were also held with the Social Department of NAOMI and the QRT manager as well as the head of the photography team. While a corresponding meeting was held between the ladies and the panel moderator.

At the beginning of the Coalition Meeting we present the NIEM project (You can see at Annex III the intro banner and Annex IV the presentation of NIEM project).

A discussion with the speakers followed in this difficult context not only because of the wars and conflicts but also because of all that we live in our everyday lives. Only in 2021, in Greece, we have witnessed 17 femicides. Amidst all that, and while our goal is still equality, we are fully aware that equality cannot concern some but all of us, it is not possible to move forward, towards equality, when so many among us are held back. In this meeting the speakers discussed about the challenges faced by escaping their country of origin in search of safety. We discussed the difficulties of the journey, the first reception in Greece, the conditions of the accommodation in refugee camps but also in housing programs. Our main goal was to approach the various adversities a woman experience throughout the multiple roles a woman has as a wife, as a daughter and as a single woman.

Women in this part present difficulties by sharing their personal stories and experiences.

In the second part of the Coalition meeting we focused on the efforts and the struggle of women in order not only to cope with the challenges, but also to bring change and improve their daily life in essential and creative ways.

Two of the women work and have managed to make a living from it without stopping to create through their work and hobbies. The other two women are being trained in photography using the lens as a weapon to raise awareness of what happens to women either in Greece or in their country of origin. They deal with issues related to homelessness, environmental protection and gender equality, highlighting important elements from the difficult reality and proposing changes to improve the quality of life. It is important for all the speakers to continue to be dynamic and find people to support them in order to feel secure in what they undertake to do.

In the last part before the discussion, the two organizations and their cooperation in highlighting women's efforts were briefly presented (you can see Annex V and Annex VI). Also, the two photographers present an example of their photographic work (you can see Annex VII).

The discussion that followed the speeches was warmly attended by the people in the room.

It is more than important to mention that the Coalition Meeting were held in English after the request of the women participated in the panel. They asked not to have any kind of translation so that none of the participants feel that the message they want to convey to those who attended the event is mediated by any kind of interpretation.

Dissemination of the event - Publicity

Invitations were sent via email, while a press release (See Annex VIII) was sent both to the Media and to the entire contact list of Antigone, which includes individuals as well as organizations. In the event that was created and uploaded on Facebook, 64 people stated their intention to participate in the meeting⁴. In addition, the event was promoted by NAOMI's facebook page⁵.

The meeting was published by the following media:

Thessaloniki, __/__/__

"ANTIGONE - Information and Documentation Center for Racism, Ecology, Peace and Non-Violence" (ANTIGONE) organizes the 21st meeting of the alliance within the program "National Integration and Evaluation Mechanism (NIEM)". The topic of the meeting is "Refugee women in Greece".

It is estimated that about half of the displaced and refugee population are women and girls. In the context of International Women's Day, and with the collaboration of women being active in NAOMI, Ecumenical Workshop for Refugees and QRT (Quick Response Team, Casa Base) we will discuss the experiences of refugee women in Greece. We will also jointly examine the dynamics and elements that can empower women and help them to participate in decisions that affect their lives.

The event will start with a briefly presentation of the NIEM program and will continue with the women's statements and the discussion on issues related to women and migration. The journey, the first reception in Greece, the accommodation in the refugee camps, the housing programs. These are some of the topics that will be addressed. But we will not just focus on the difficulties, since each of the women is making dynamic efforts to change the difficult reality.

This will allow us to examine both the difficulties and obstacles and the efforts and dynamism that some women show to cope with this difficult reality with creativity.

The women who will be on the panel have chosen English as the language of the event because they wish to communicate their messages directly without the mediation of the translation.

The alliance meeting will take place online on Friday 11 March 2022, 18:30 - 20:30 at the following link:
